4S Ranch Resident Returned to Fire District Board

3 November 2010

Voters in the Rancho Santa Fe Fire District – which includes much of 92127 – returned two incumbents to the district board on Tuesday, including 4S Ranch resident Thomas R. Hickerson.

With all 39 voting precincts counted, the San Diego County Registrar of Voters reported that John Tanner of Rancho Santa Fe led the three-candidate field, securing 3,844 votes, or 48.65%. Hickerson received 2,673 votes, or 33.83%.

John L. Ramirez, who lives just outside the 4S Ranch HOA, finished with 1,384 votes, or 17.52%.

Waste/recycling service delayed by one day in observance of Thanksgiving

Waste Management of North County and Coast Waste Management's curbside residential trash and recycling pick-up schedule will not operate in Rancho Santa Fe on Thursday, Nov. 25, in observance of Thanksgiving and will be delayed by one day the remainder of the week. Commercial customers with service on Thursday will be serviced on Friday with normal pick-up schedules the remainder of the week.

Residential customers in the following cities will be delayed one day for the remainder of the week following the holiday:

"Residential customers who usually receive service on Thursday will instead receive it Friday, and Friday's customers will receive service on Saturday," said Ken Ryan, district manager for Waste Management of North

County and Coast Waste Management. "We appreciate our customers' cooperation with the holiday schedule so that all of our employees can observe Thanksgiving."

The local Waste Management office will be closed on Thursday, Nov. 25, with normal operations resuming on Friday, Nov. 26.

The customer service center will also be closed on Thursday, Nov. 25. Customer service is available at 1-866-WM-RECYCLE Monday through Wednesday and Friday from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday from 8 a.m. to noon.

Waste Management is the leading provider of comprehensive waste and environmental services in North America. For more information about recycling, log onto <http://northcounty.wm.com>.

Santa Fe Irrigation District and RSF Fire Protection District to test fire hydrant flows

The Santa Fe Irrigation District and the Rancho Santa Fe Fire Protection District will collaborate efforts in the month of November for fire flow testing of fire hydrants throughout the Rancho Santa Fe area. Several fire hydrants in the Rancho Santa Fe community will be tested, which will result in inconsequential water loss and minor traffic delays.

The testing is required by the Insurance Services Office (ISO) to evaluate the fire suppression delivery system. The result of this review is a classification ranking that ISO distributes to insurers, helping in establishing fair premiums for fire insurance.

The ISO rating goes from 1-10 with 1 being the best. The ISO rates Fire Districts approximately every 8-15 years unless the Water or Fire District can show they have made major changes that will affect the rating. The last ISO testing for the Rancho Santa Fe area was 15 years ago in which the RSF Fire Protection District received a ranking of four. Generally, a lower ISO ranking would result in more favorable insurance premiums for a community.

Fifty percent of the rating is derived by the quality of the fire department, 40 percent is

Education Foundation funded Specialized Teachers elevate the quality of education

While public school districts across the country are reducing services in response to rampant cutbacks in funding, at R. Roger Rowe School, we can consider ourselves extraordinarily lucky. Not only do the children benefit from attending a brand new school with smaller class sizes, they also have an abundance of specialized teachers who enrich programs beyond measure. "In many schools it is necessary for the classroom teacher to wear many hats," said Pamela Dirkes, co-chair of the RSF Education Foundation. "As a former elementary school teacher in Carlsbad," she recalls, "I was the music and art teacher. I was the science teacher. I was also the PE coach."

Nearly 60 percent of Teachers at Rowe have Advanced Degrees

Thanks to the Education Foundation's Five Star Education program at R. Roger Rowe, students have in-depth instruction in classes such as music, art, science and math taught by specialized teachers who are highly educated experts in their field. Nearly 60 percent of R. Roger Rowe teachers have advanced degrees as compared to 19 percent on average across California schools.

Specialized Teachers impart a wealth of knowledge and passion

The R. Roger Rowe School is alive with the sound of music, thanks to music teacher Maureen Blinn. Blinn employs the Orff Schulwerk approach to music education, which focuses on putting the child in charge of their music making. "Music instruction is available and given to all students in grades K-8. We have a state-of-the-art Yamaha keyboard lab, a rich supply of classroom instruments and curriculum, and a beautiful, new Performing Arts Center where student talent and achievement can be showcased," said Blinn.

"Studies show that music instruction correlates with higher student achievement. We are very fortunate to have an Education Foundation that provides Arts Education in our school, as many other districts no longer have this kind of specialized instruction at the elementary level," added Blinn. An article by Catherine Hillard on eSORTMENT supports Blinn's perspective, "Many people underestimate music education in the schools today. Music teachers have to learn to play every instrument, they must learn music history, theory, composition, conducting, teaching methodologies, and so much more. Our stu-

From student firefighter, Michel went through every position possible at RSF: firefighter, engineer, captain, deputy fire marshal, CERT program manager, deputy chief of training and, most recently, deputy chief of operations.

"In that time, everyone here has taught me a lot, how to grow up and be the person I'm supposed to be," Michel said.

There were sniffles in the audience during the special and somewhat emotional ceremony and some "awww's" were heard when he paid tribute to his wife.

"I want to thank my wife for being there when I'm not," Michel said, surprising her with a bouquet of flowers hidden inside the dais.

As the Fire Chief, Michel will be responsible for managing the fire protection and life safety resources for the RSFFPD. He will also provide recommendations and technical staff assistance to the Board of Directors. Chief Michel's other duties will include implementing and enforcing the rules and regulations governing the Fire District, continuing the implementation of the district's Strategic Plan, and coordinating activities with other fire and governmental agencies.

"I am very honored to be presented with this opportunity," said Michel. "I am humbled by the confidence the Board of Directors has shown in me and, while I know the position comes with many challenges, I am looking forward to serving the Fire District in this capacity."

dents in turn are exposed to this wealth of knowledge."

Proper Instruction in Art & Music improves overall problem solving abilities

As quoted in the New York Times, Elliot Eisner, education professor emeritus at Stanford University, said, "Learning through the arts promotes the idea that there is more than one solution to a problem, or more than one answer to a question." "Students who study the arts seriously are taught to see better, to envision, to persist, to be playful and learn from mistakes, to make critical judgments and justify such judgments," said Ellen Winner, psychology professor at Boston College. At R. Roger Rowe School, art teacher Janis Reeser exposes students to all these benefits with flair! "We currently have two amazing artists who share their expertise with our students, Gerrit Greve and Dr. Tim Leucker," said Reeser. Greve works with a Caring Community project called Hearts for Healing. Students' heart themed art works are donated and auctioned to raise funds for local health care centers. Leucker helped students create the beautiful coral reef mosaic, which is showcased on the 400 building of the new school. "The opportunity to work in groups with professional artists, materials and tools provides our students with real life learning experiences. When students see their work on display in a public space, their sense of accomplishment and pride is undeniable," Reeser added.

Specialized Science & Technology Education a must for future generations

The science program being conducted in brand new classrooms and labs can certainly be described as "cutting-edge." "The facilities are amazing," says Kelly Stine, R. Roger Rowe Middle School science teacher. Stine and other teachers viewed the science classrooms at a state-of-the-art college. "We based the designs of our classrooms on what we saw," said Stine. "We have everything we need at our fingertips: digital microscopes with camera capabilities, real animals for dissection, computers for teachers and students, lab tables and display and I can't believe it's not on the front page of every local newspaper, every day."

In other news:

Review to keep up with ever-changing technology.

"Moving forward, we want to be able to evolve our website to consistently meet the Ranch's need for timely, relevant and local information. In just the first two weeks with the new platform, we've seen huge improvements in our readers' abilities to find the information they're looking for."

The Review hired Calacles, a La Jolla-based online consulting firm, www.calacles.com, to develop, design and launch the site.

"The staff at Calacles did a great job of working with us to design a site with locals in mind," said Halie Johnson, online content and engagement editor for the Review and its sister papers.

As the site evolves, Johnson said the Review plans to host community bloggers.

"If you have a good idea for a blog about life in Rancho Santa Fe, I'd like to talk to you," she said.

The site will also feature a video player, user-submitted photos and will host online contests.

"Our first contest is for the best holiday lights, so get your tinsel and ladder ready and be sure to snap some photos," Johnson said.

Calacles specializes in effectively using social media and search engine optimization to help companies get their message out. The Review now has a contract with Calacles to extend that expertise to local businesses by building their websites.

The new home page highlights the most current Rancho Santa Fe news and feature stories, profiles about fascinating local people, the work done in our businesses, schools and research institutions, the activities of community groups and photo galleries filled with local faces.

"The Review has always worked hard to shine a spotlight on the people, places and events that make our community unique," said Review Executive Editor Lorine Wright. "We now have a website that truly gives these stories the play they deserve."

"Articles about health and science, local athletes, cultural institutions, the local housing market, restaurants and businesses are easy to find from the home page," Wright said.

The site also features classifieds, obituaries, a business directory, open house listings and plenty of helpful information for visitors.

"We work hard to give locals plenty of options for local entertainment with our arts and entertainment calendar, which is very comprehensive on the web," said web Arts & Entertainment Editor Susan DeMaggio. "Watch for our upcoming restaurant reviews and expanded coverage of North Coastal San Diego's cultural institutions."

Wright said the Review also strives to provide a forum for community discussion.

"Residents can still use our site to voice their opinions by posting comments at the end of any story," Wright said.

"They can contact us using our online submission form to send letters to the editor, news pitches and other announcements."

"We hope to have those stories archived in the next month," Johnson said.

"We'd love to hear what you think," Pfeiffer said.

Contact Halie Johnson at halie@lajollalight.com, Lorine Wright at editor@sdranch-coastnews.com or Susan DeMaggio at susandemaggio@lajollalight.com or call the office at (858) 459-4201.

cases. We have all the resources to do whatever we want to do as teachers. There are no limitations," Stine added. As Science for All Americans points out, "A society aware of the benefits of science and technology will work to ensure it remains scientifically and technologically competitive. Also, a science-literate society will provide the necessary support, funding and promotion to ensure future generations continue to improve upon modern advances that benefit everyone." By providing our students and teachers with this terrific environment, we advance our students along the path of knowledge. Everything the Education Foundation provides to the science program reinforces the joy that Stine brings to teaching. "This is fun!" she concluded.

Specialized Teachers improves Teacher to Student Ratio for Differentiated Learning

The Differentiated Math Program at R. Roger Rowe School is another standout. "Elementary school students are grouped together for thirty minutes, twice a week to differentiate instruction and meet their individual needs," said third grade teacher Janel Maud. "More advanced students are able to receive enrichment, pushing them to the most advanced areas of math at their grade levels. Students who need additional help get extra time to thoroughly cover concepts and ensure understanding," she added. "We offer acceleration and intervention at the middle school levels as well," said Lindy Delaney, middle school principal and superintendent. "Math students demonstrating the greatest need will work with intervention specialists one-on-one. For more advanced students we offer courses ranging from Pre-Algebra through Geometry," she added. On back to school night, seventh grade math teacher Paul Coco spoke passionately about his experiences as a student, "I had a teacher who really inspired me as a math student. He was the reason I went into teaching. I strive to instill the same enthusiasm in my students," he added.

"As schools cut time for the arts (and sciences), they may be losing their ability to produce not just the artistic creators of the future, but innovative leaders who improve the world they inherit," says a Boston Globe article by Ellen Winner and Lois Hetland. Thanks to the generosity of parents and the community through the RSF Education Foundation, the R. Roger Rowe School is able to attract and retain excellent specialized teachers. This year the Foundation's goal is to raise one million dollars in order to sustain its commitment to the Five-Star Education program, including expert instruction in the arts and sciences. One million dollars divided by 680 Ranch School students equals $1,470 per student. This "fair share" is the amount the RSF Education Foundation needs to raise on behalf of each student. Accordingly, parents are being asked to contribute at least their "fair share" for each student in their family.

based on the water supply and 10 percent by the dispatch services. The ISO staff examines a fire department's engine companies and the amount of water needed to fight a fire in a particular community for 50 percent weight for the ISO.

For the water supply component, ISO checks whether the community has a sufficient water supply for the fire suppression beyond daily maximum consumption. The testing will involve increased flow of water from fire hydrants, which may cause discolored water at the tap during the process. If a customer has discolored water for more than an hour, the customer should call the Santa Fe Irrigation District at (858) 756-2424. Fire flow tests are conducted at various locations in the community based on the distribution of fire hydrants in the service area. At this time, the RSF Fire Protection District and the Santa Fe Irrigation District cannot identify the specific locations of the testing; however, the tests will only be conducted during the daytime.

Customers with questions about the actual testing and inspection schedule for the fire hydrants should call the Rancho Santa Fe Fire Protection District at (858) 756-5971 or the Santa Fe Irrigation District at (858) 756-2424.

NCL presents 'Hollywood: Dress the Part!' fashion show

The San Dieguito Chapter of the National Charity League will present its annual Fashion Show on Nov. 21 at 3 p.m. at the Del Mar Marriott, 11966 El Camino Real, San Diego.

The Fashion Show for 10th grade girls is a National Charity League tradition. It provides the girls with training in poise, stage presence, and personal style.

National Charity League (NCL) has been in existence for more than 50 years. Currently represented in 17 states, NCL has over 160 chapters with more than 40,000 active members. Its mission is to foster mother-daughter relationships through community service and to provide its members leadership development and cultural experiences.

The San Dieguito Chapter was formed in February 1998 based on the local need for an additional chapter. Held in January of 1999, the chapter's first Fashion Show had 180 guests. In just over a decade attendance has more than doubled at our annual event.

The National Charity League San Dieguito Chapter is made up of a group of young women who are athletes, cheerleaders, dancers, performers, equestrians, and scholars. While their interests are diverse they share one thing in common, they all find joy and fulfillment in helping others. These young women will contribute to our chapter's annual goal of providing 13,000 philanthropy hours and spend many more hours supporting our chapter through leadership roles and projects and meeting attendance.

Susie King, Trish Melton, and Beth Ross-Buckley are the co-chairs of the 2013 Fashion Show.

New fire chief sworn in 11.17.10 - 03:29 pm

RANCHO SANTA FE — The Rancho Santa Fe Fire Protection District hosted a reception Nov. 10 during which Tony Michel was sworn in as the district's new Fire Chief.

He is filling the role vacated when Chief Nick Pavone retired at the end of October.

“I am very honored and excited to be presented with this opportunity,” Michel said. “I am humbled by the confidence the Board of Directors has shown in me and, while I know the position comes with many challenges, I am looking forward to serving the fire district in this capacity.”

As the Fire Chief, Michel will be responsible for managing the fire protection and life safety resources for the RSFFPD. He will also provide recommendations and technical staff assistance to the Board of Directors. Chief Michel's other duties will include implementing and enforcing the rules and regulations governing the fire district, continuing the implementation of the district's Strategic Plan, and coordinating activities with other fire and governmental agencies.

RSF mental performance coach featured in new movie 'Tapping the Source'

By Karen Billing
Staff Writer

Rancho Santa Fe mental performance coach Dave Austin is featured in a new movie titled "Tapping the Source," a sequel to the hit movie and book "The Secret." In the film, 115 renowned entrepreneurs, spiritual leaders, health experts, scientists, actors, athletes, authors and philanthropists reveal the source of their lasting happiness and extraordinary success.

Austin also produced the music for the film. One of the songs in the movie, "Shine," was written and performed by his 21-year-old son Shane.

"I hope for it to have an effect on people and help people change for the better," Austin said.

"It's been an interesting time the last few years, we've all been affected by the economy...When people see the movie I think it will be powerful and uplifting. There isn't any obstacle too big in life, there is a bigger purpose."

The movie premiered on Friday, Nov. 12, at the Agape International Spiritual Center in Culver City.

The 115 people featured in the film, along with Austin include author Victor Villasenor; Michael Bernard Beckwith, founder of the Agape Center; Olympic gold medalist Shaun White; actress Mariel Hemingway; and Rancho Santa Fe resident John Assaraf, who was also featured in "The Secret."

The interviews are powerful, Austin said, with people who have found great success in the categories of business, courage, adversity, arts and sports.

"115 people speak as one voice," Austin said. "You come away from [the film] with the most important thing in life, it's about happiness."

Austin's interviews are shown during the sports and courage sections of the film. In the courage section, Austin talks about what he went through 12 years ago when he was told he was going to lose his wife and his son Daniel as there were complications in his son's birth.

"My wife was a pillar of strength," Austin said, describing how she had surrendered to a greater power and assured him and herself that they would get through whatever happened. They did.

His "miracle child" Daniel is now a healthy, happy 12-year-old attending R. Roger Rowe School.

Austin expects the movie to follow the path of "The Secret" film, which was shown in screenings across the country. It will also be available for people to purchase online.

In addition to the movie, Austin is working on a TV show called "Beyond the Field: Players of Faith" about professional athletes who find success through their faith and positive thinking.

"Everyone picks up on the negative because that's what sells," Austin said. "I want to shift that."

While Austin works with a lot of professional athletes as clients, this season he's been sharing his methods with some local amateurs: the Torrey Pines High School football team.

After some down seasons where the Falcons finished 3-7 and 2-8, the team narrowly missed going undefeated this season, finishing 9-1 after Friday night's loss to La Costa Canyon, earning a bye in the first round of the CIF Division 1 playoffs.

Austin said he doesn't take all the credit for their success—he just gives them the elements and the team and coaching staff have to "buy in" and commit.

"It's really been fun working with them," Austin said. "They're a super group of guys and they've really latched on to the philosophy."

"Tapping the Source" is available online at <http://tappingthesource-movie.com>.

RSF School District finalizing documents related to Dacus property

By Karen Billing

The Rancho Santa Fe School District is finalizing documents after at least a year's worth of work with the California Department of Toxic Substances Control (DTSC) pertaining to the purchase of the Dacus property. The district closed escrow on the purchase of the 1.3-acre El Fuego property on July 23, 2009. The property is currently the temporary home of the Rancho Santa Fe Patrol. The Rancho Santa Fe Association sold the property to the school district for $1.3 million.

When the district purchased the Dacus property, the DTSC granted the school use of the property for playing fields and parking lot only. District superintendent Lindy Delaney said if the school district wanted to build a structure there, which isn't in its plans, it would have to go back through the DTSC for review.

The DTSC documents were finalized at a special board meeting on Nov. 11.

The Association's plans are currently in the works to move the temporary RSF Patrol facilities off the Dacus property to a permanent home on the Osuna Ranch property.

Changes to Fire Services Plan will save more tax dollars

By Marlena Chavira-Medford

Last year representatives from Solana Beach, Del Mar, Encinitas and Rancho Santa Fe signed the Cooperative Fire Management Service (CFMS) agreement, a plan that allows the four communities to consolidate fire services, making for faster response times and lower operating costs. During its Nov. 10 meeting, the Solana Beach City Council approved changes to that plan that will further those savings, resulting in more than $100,000 cumulatively for the city.

In September, the CFMS plan went through its first realignment when a Solana Beach deputy chief replaced a retiring Encinitas chief, a change that resulted in about $93,000 savings in taxpayers' money throughout the four communities.

An ad hoc committee, which includes Solana Beach council members Joe Kellejian and David Roberts, has now helped devise a second phase of realignment.

In a presentation to council, Encinitas deputy fire chief Scott Henry explained how this next phase of realignment will work: The four communities will begin relying more on services from a training officer in Rancho Santa Fe's Fire Protection District, and Solana Beach's deputy chief will be assigned as support. That tweak will result in about $9,000 more in savings for the communities, bringing the total savings to about $102,000 between the two realignments.

"I'm pleased to report [the CMFS plan] exceeded our expectations," said Solana Beach city manager David Ott, who helped launch the CFMS plan. "We started this with the philosophy of saying 'We'll never be able to figure everything out before we get into it — so let's go forward, let's take the next step and we'll figure it out as we go.' And, that's exactly what's occurred. It's been an amazingly positive experience."

Before the CFMS plan, the city of Solana Beach had one fire chief and one deputy chief, at the cost of $419,000 annually. With this latest alignment, the city will have one fire chief, three deputy chiefs, one training officer, three battalion chiefs, one fire marshal, and one analyst, at a cost of $294,800 annually — saving the city of Solana Beach about $124,200 cumulatively.

Henry told the council that the CMFS plan has been so successful, in fact, that other agencies are starting to look to it as a blueprint.

"We're into new ground, we're doing things that other agencies are starting to look at as a model," he said. "We're really proud of being pioneers of something that's really critical in today's economic climate."

Veterans lauded at Horizon Prep

The Horizon Prep Veterans Day Commemoration honored Veterans and their families with a special patriotic chapel service. The message was clear: Thank you! Horizon Military Pastor Steve Armendariz quoted Billy Graham in saying, "Thank you isn't much, but it's the only thing we have in the English language that says it. So, Thank you!" There was hardly a dry eye in the house after a riveting video presentation highlighting the service of our Veterans. Students participated with special readings and songs. The United States has 24 million living Veterans, according to the website www.va.gov.

New RSF Fire District Chief takes command

By Karen Billing

There's a new chief in town.

Rancho Santa Fe Fire Protection District held its badge ceremony to swear in new Chief Tony Michel on Wednesday, Nov. 10. Michel took over from former Chief Nick Pavone, who retired at the end of October.

"To say I'm excited is an understatement," said Michel to an engine bay full of firefighters and friends.

As is custom, Michel's wife Patrice pinned on his new badge. His proud father David Michel was in the audience, as well as his children Katherine and Steven.

Jim Ashcraft, president of the fire district's board of directors, remarked that the board is very happy to install Michel as the new chief.

"He is a wonderful man with great integrity," Ashcraft said. "He thinks things through and he's careful to make sure everyone is served; he works to make things better."

Ashcraft said this is the second time the district has been served by someone who started out as a cadet with the district, Pavone being the first. Michel started out as a student firefighter with the district 27 years ago.

"I remember 27 years ago, standing in about the same spot here with the captain and he showed me how to put my turnouts on," Michel said, referring to the protective gear that firefight-

Cap and Gown contributors celebrated

The Rancho Santa Fe Education Foundation honored Cap and Gown contributors to the R. Roger Rowe School with a big "Gracias!" and a Mexican Fiesta on Nov. 13 at the home of Nora and Alex Kaiser. The celebration follows the recent "Red Envelope" campaign, a school-wide effort to collect contributions supporting the district's "Five-Star Education" programs. The Cap and Gown Reception is an annual event celebrating the success of the Red Envelope Campaign and honoring contributors at the Cap & Gown level and above. This event is sponsored by community partner Wells Fargo The Private Bank. The volunteer organizers of this year's event were: Nancy Bailey, Nora Kaiser, Dana McCaskill and Julie Plashkes. Review launches new website

The Rancho Santa Fe Review launched its new website (www.ranchosantafereview.com) in late October, extending its commitment to provide the community with up-to-the-minute news and information. The new site offers interactive features, is easier to navigate and provides the same content as the print edition, plus more.

"A lot of thought and expertise went into planning and redesigning the new ranchosantafereview.com," Publisher Phyllis Pfeiffer said. "We are very pleased with the outcome and think our readers will appreciate the changes we've made."

Pfeiffer said the goal is to move onto a platform that will allow the

From student firefighter, Michel went through every position possible at RSF: firefighter, engineer, captain, deputy fire marshal, CERT program manager, deputy chief of training and, most recently, deputy chief of operations.

"In that time, everyone here has taught me a lot, how to grow up and be the person I'm supposed to be," Michel said.

There were sniffles in the audience during the special and somewhat emotional ceremony and some "awww's" were heard when he paid tribute to his wife.

"I want to thank my wife for being there when I'm not," Michel said, surprising her with a bouquet of flowers hidden inside the dais.

As the Fire Chief, Michel will be responsible for managing the fire protection and life safety resources for the RSFFPD. He will also provide recommendations and technical staff assistance to the Board of Directors. Chief Michel's other duties will include implementing and enforcing the rules and regulations governing the Fire District, continuing the implementation of the district's Strategic Plan, and coordinating activities with other fire and governmental agencies.

"I am very honored to be presented with this opportunity," said Michel. "I am humbled by the confidence the Board of Directors has shown in me and, while I know the position comes with many challenges, I am looking forward to serving the Fire District in this capacity."

dents in turn are exposed to this wealth of knowledge."

Proper Instruction in Art & Music improves overall problem solving abilities

As quoted in the New York Times, Elliot Eisner, education professor emeritus at Stanford University, said, "Learning through the arts promotes the idea that there is more than one solution to a problem, or more than one answer to a question." "Students who study the arts seriously are taught to see better, to envision, to persist, to be playful and learn from mistakes, to make critical judgments and justify such judgments," said Ellen Winner, psychology professor at Boston College. At R. Roger Rowe School, art teacher Janis Reeser exposes students to all these benefits with flair! "We currently have two amazing artists who share their expertise with our students, Gerrit Greve and Dr. Tim Leucker," said Reeser. Greve works with a Caring Community project called Hearts for Healing. Students' heart themed art works are donated and auctioned to raise funds for local health care centers. Leucker helped students create the beautiful coral reef mosaic, which is showcased on the 400 building of the new school. "The opportunity to work in groups with professional artists, materials and tools provides our students with real life learning experiences. When students see their work on display in a public space, their sense of accomplishment and pride is undeniable," Reeser added.

Specialized Science & Technology Education a must for future generations

The science program being conducted in brand new classrooms and labs can certainly be described as "cutting-edge." "The facilities are amazing," says Kelly Stine, R. Roger Rowe Middle School science teacher. Stine and other teachers viewed the science classrooms at a state-of-the-art college. "We based the designs of our classrooms on what we saw," said Stine. "We have everything we need at our fingertips: digital microscopes with camera capabilities, real animals for dissection, computers for teachers and students, lab tables and display and I can't believe it's not on the front page of every local newspaper, every day."

Review to keep up with ever-changing technology.

"Moving forward, we want to be able to evolve our website to consistently meet the Ranch's need for timely, relevant and local information. In just the first two weeks with the new platform, we've seen huge improvements in our readers' abilities to find the information they're looking for."

The Review hired Calacles, a La Jolla-based online consulting firm, www.calacles.com, to develop, design and launch the site.

"The staff at Calacles did a great job of working with us to design a site with locals in mind," said Halie Johnson, online content and engagement editor for the Review and its sister papers.

As the site evolves, Johnson said the Review plans to host community bloggers.

"If you have a good idea for a blog about life in Rancho Santa Fe, I'd like to talk to you," she said.

The site will also feature a video player, user-submitted photos and will host online contests.

"Our first contest is for the best holiday lights, so get your tinsel and ladder ready and be sure to snap some photos," Johnson said.

Calacles specializes in effectively using social media and search engine optimization to help companies get their message out. The Review now has a contract with Calacles to extend that expertise to local businesses by building their websites.

The new home page highlights the most current Rancho Santa Fe news and feature stories, profiles about fascinating local people, the work done in our businesses, schools and research institutions, the activities of community groups and photo galleries filled with local faces.

"The Review has always worked hard to shine a spotlight on the people, places and events that make our community unique," said Review Executive Editor Lorine Wright. "We now have a website that truly gives these stories the play they deserve."

"Articles about health and science, local athletes, cultural institutions, the local housing market, restaurants and businesses are easy to find from the home page," Wright said.

The site also features classifieds, obituaries, a business directory, open house listings and plenty of helpful information for visitors.

"We work hard to give locals plenty of options for local entertainment with our arts and entertainment calendar, which is very comprehensive on the web," said web Arts & Entertainment Editor Susan DeMaggio. "Watch for our upcoming restaurant reviews and expanded coverage of North Coastal San Diego's cultural institutions."

Wright said the Review also strives to provide a forum for community discussion.

"Residents can still use our site to voice their opinions by posting comments at the end of any story," Wright said.

"They can contact us using our online submission form to send letters to the editor, news pitches and other announcements."

"We hope to have those stories archived in the next month," Johnson said.

"We'd love to hear what you think," Pfeiffer said.

Contact Halie Johnson at halie@lajollalight.com, Lorine Wright at editor@sdranch-coastnews.com or Susan DeMaggio at susandemaggio@lajollalight.com or call the office at (858) 459-4201.

cases. We have all the resources to do whatever we want to do as teachers. There are no limitations," Stine added. As Science for All Americans points out, "A society aware of the benefits of science and technology will work to ensure it remains scientifically and technologically competitive. Also, a science-literate society will provide the necessary support, funding and promotion to ensure future generations continue to improve upon modern advances that benefit everyone." By providing our students and teachers with this terrific environment, we advance our students along the path of knowledge. Everything the Education Foundation provides to the science program reinforces the joy that Stine brings to teaching. "This is fun!" she concluded.

Specialized Teachers improves Teacher to Student Ratio for Differentiated Learning

The Differentiated Math Program at R. Roger Rowe School is another standout. "Elementary school students are grouped together for thirty minutes, twice a week to differentiate instruction and meet their individual needs," said third grade teacher Janel Maud. "More advanced students are able to receive enrichment, pushing them to the most advanced areas of math at their grade levels. Students who need additional help get extra time to thoroughly cover concepts and ensure understanding," she added. "We offer acceleration and intervention at the middle school levels as well," said Lindy Delaney, middle school principal and superintendent. "Math students demonstrating the greatest need will work with intervention specialists one-on-one. For more advanced students we offer courses ranging from Pre-Algebra through Geometry," she added. On back to school night, seventh grade math teacher Paul Coco spoke passionately about his experiences as a student, "I had a teacher who really inspired me as a math student. He was the reason I went into teaching. I strive to instill the same enthusiasm in my students," he added.

"As schools cut time for the arts (and sciences), they may be losing their ability to produce not just the artistic creators of the future, but innovative leaders who improve the world they inherit," says a Boston Globe article by Ellen Winner and Lois Hetland. Thanks to the generosity of parents and the community through the RSF Education Foundation, the R. Roger Rowe School is able to attract and retain excellent specialized teachers. This year the Foundation's goal is to raise one million dollars in order to sustain its commitment to the Five-Star Education program, including expert instruction in the arts and sciences. One million dollars divided by 680 Ranch School students equals $1,470 per student. This "fair share" is the amount the RSF Education Foundation needs to raise on behalf of each student. Accordingly, parents are being asked to contribute at least their "fair share" for each student in their family.

For the water supply component, ISO checks whether the community has a sufficient water supply for the fire suppression beyond daily maximum consumption. The testing will involve increased flow of water from fire hydrants, which may cause discolored water at the tap during the process. If a customer has discolored water for more than an hour, the customer should call the Santa Fe Irrigation District at (858) 756-2424. Fire flow tests are conducted at various locations in the community based on the distribution of fire hydrants in the service area. At this time, the RSF Fire Protection District and the Santa Fe Irrigation District cannot identify the specific locations of the testing; however, the tests will only be conducted during the daytime.

Customers with questions about the actual testing and inspection schedule for the fire hydrants should call the Rancho Santa Fe Fire Protection District at (858) 756-5971 or the Santa Fe Irrigation District at (858) 756-2424.

NCL presents 'Hollywood: Dress the Part!' fashion show

The San Dieguito Chapter of the National Charity League will present its annual Fashion Show on Nov. 21 at 3 p.m. at the Del Mar Marriott, 11966 El Camino Real, San Diego.

The Fashion Show for 10th grade girls is a National Charity League tradition. It provides the girls with training in poise, stage presence, and personal style.

National Charity League (NCL) has been in existence for more than 50 years. Currently represented in 17 states, NCL has over 160 chapters with more than 40,000 active members. Its mission is to foster mother-daughter relationships through community service and to provide its members leadership development and cultural experiences.

The San Dieguito Chapter was formed in February 1998 based on the local need for an additional chapter. Held in January of 1999, the chapter's first Fashion Show had 180 guests. In just over a decade attendance has more than doubled at our annual event.

The National Charity League San Dieguito Chapter is made up of a group of young women who are athletes, cheerleaders, dancers, performers, equestrians, and scholars. While their interests are diverse they share one thing in common, they all find joy and fulfillment in helping others. These young women will contribute to our chapter's annual goal of providing 13,000 philanthropy hours and spend many more hours supporting our chapter through leadership roles and projects and meeting attendance.

Susie King, Trish Melton, and Beth Ross-Buckley are the co-chairs of the 2013 Fashion Show.

The joys of raising teen boys

I think I have figured out why teenage boys are so darned adorable. It's a self-preservation thing. Kind of like why babies are cute and look like their fathers for the first day or so.

The hardest part of my empty-nest challenge is the absence of teenagers, especially those goofy, hilarious, energy-charged boys.

Of course, I dearly love my daughter and all the young women who are friends of both my children, but anyone who has children knows that during the teen years, girls can be just scary. And boys are just hilarious.

I was at the local thrift store recently when a half-dozen tall, grinning, teenage boys blew through the door. It was glorious to behold.

I swear they sucked all the oxygen out of the room with their uber presence. They ricocheted around the store, searching for costume ideas, and I found myself just standing their grinning and watching them.

I started to just laugh, and continue to chuckle even now.

They walked around with silly hats on their heads, tried on oversized jackets, teased each other relentlessly and, to the amazement of the staff, did not break anything.

It was better than any anti-depressant and I was sorry to see them roll back out the door in about five minutes, moving on to their next diversion.

I try to spend as much time as I can around the under-25 set, where I absorb any excess "youth" they simply radiate. I swear I get a boost through osmosis just from being in the same house and hearing them laugh.

I just heard some great "raising boys" stories from an acquaintance who raised three of them.

Like the time one walked down to the shopping center, which has a "shortcut" across a very marshy area on the way. He came home with mud up to his armpits and one shoe. He probably didn't take that shortcut the next time ... but then again, he's a boy, so he might have.

Another great story came after son No. 2 cut himself badly on a gardening

'Keep alive the stories of our vets,' speaker says

By Bianca Kaplanek

SOLANA BEACH — Being the guest speaker at this year's Veterans Day ceremony was as much a learning experience for Air Force Lt. Col. Scott Hall as it was for those who gathered Nov. 11 at La Colonia Park to honor the men and women who serve our nation.

In writing his speech, Hall said he discovered information about his family's military service he had never known.

While serving in Vietnam his father, retired Air Force Col. Johnnie Hall, earned the Distinguished Flying Cross, awarded for heroism or extraordinary achievement while participating in an aerial flight.

"How did I, his son for 44 years and an Air Force pilot myself, not know that?" asked Hall, a Carlsbad resident who earned nearly a dozen medals while serving in Operation Desert Storm.

He said one reason is that his father, like many veterans, is modest and keeps his service to himself.

"The second is, I never asked," he said. "I should have."

That discovery prompted Hall to ask his son, Peter, about the two tours he served with the Army in Iraq. "I've got some scars," Peter, 26, told his father. "Some you can see. Others you can't.

"But I helped change the world and destroy evil," Peter said. "I'll take the scars."

Hall said Veterans Day is as much about paying tribute to the men and women of the military as it is learning about their service.

"Today's young people need to remember and learn from our trials and experiences," he said. "They need to learn that bravery is not the lack of fear but being able to act in the face of fear."

Hall encouraged attendees to ask family members, neighbors, doctors and pastors if they have served. If the answer is yes, ask them to tell a story, he said.

"We need to keep alive the stories of our vets," he said. "Our children and grandchildren need to hear those stories. It will foster their love for this great nation."

In a brief "soapbox moment," Hall said he planned to use the word great more often when talking about his country.

"Our past and present veterans have given their lives, put themselves in harm's way, sacrificed time away from their families, friends and loved ones for this nation," he said. "It is great because of them."

Agencies test to make sure Ranch's fire hydrants work

RANCHO SANTA FE — The Santa Fe Irrigation District and the Rancho Santa Fe Fire Protection District will collaborate efforts in the month of November for fire flow testing of fire hydrants throughout the Rancho Santa Fe area. Several fire hydrants in the Rancho Santa Fe community will be tested, which will result in minor water loss and possible short traffic delays.

The testing will involve increased flow of water from fire hydrants, which may cause discolored water in area taps during the process.

If a customer has discolored water for more than an hour, they may call the Santa Fe Irrigation District at (858) 756-2424.

The testing is required by the Insurance Services Office to evaluate the fire suppression delivery system. The result of this review is a classification ranking that ISO distributes to insurers, helping in establishing fair premiums for fire insurance.

The ISO rating goes from one to 10 with one being the best. The ISO rates fire districts approximately every eight to 15 years unless the water or fire district can show they have made major changes that will affect the rating. The last ISO testing for the Rancho Santa Fe area was 15 years ago in which the RSF Fire Protection District received a ranking of four. Generally, a lower ISO ranking would result in more favorable insurance premiums for a community.

Fifty percent of the rating is derived by the quality of the fire department, 40 percent is based on the water supply and 10 percent by the dispatch services. The ISO staff examines a fire department's engine companies and the amount of water needed to fight a fire in a particular community for 50 percent weight for the ISO.

For the water supply component, ISO checks whether the community has a sufficient water supply for the fire suppression beyond daily maximum consumption.

You can add meat, seasoned bread-crumbs, cheese or onion for extra flavor. The first reader tip shares another way to use up leftover mashed potatoes.

Use for leftover mashed potatoes: We use leftover mashed potatoes to make potato soup. Simply thin it down with milk or water until it is the consistency you want, bring to a gentle boil and then top with bacon, cheese, chives and sour cream. An absolute favorite in our house. If you don't have quite enough, add a can of creamed corn to stretch the recipe. — Daisy, Canada

Reuse paper towel tubes: I store my shoes on a shoe rack in the closet wall. I noticed that the U-shaped wire made indentations on the leather of the shoes. I now stuff TP cardboard rolls into my shoes first, then slide the tube onto the U-shaped wire support. It keeps the shoe from resting against the wire of the rack. I adjust the length of the tube to suit the shoe; sandals get a paper-towel tube. — Sandra N., e-mail

I use the tubes from paper towels, the few I get, to roll linens in so they don't crease and wrinkle. Works well for me. — Liz, e-mail

Re-create: It can be hard to see the potential in thrift-store or recycled items, so I like to approach the problem from the other direction. I browse the high-end stores to find ideas that I like, then search for ways to re-create them. A $200 feather trimmed chenille throw was re-created with a $20 Target chenille throw and $40 of feather trim from my local upholstery shop. Granted, it's still a major splurge. But when company is over, it makes my beat-up, cracked leather love seat look lux. — W. Herdman, e-mail

Reuse a cereal box: You can cut apart cereal boxes and make templates for measuring quilting pieces or make stars, bells, etc., and cover them with foil for Christmas decorations. The lightweight pasteboard is useful for many crafts. — Pat, e-mail

Del Mar still seeks letter of support

By Bianca Kaplanek

COAST CITIES — The volley continues in Del Mar's quest to obtain a letter from Solana Beach supporting its purchase of the Del Mar Fairgrounds.

At the Nov. 8 meeting, Del Mar council members opted to continue discussions with its northern neighbor rather than provide a direct response to Solana Beach's request for equal representation and ownership.

They said it is too early in the process to make any commitments.

"I think it's important to keep this conversation alive," Councilman Don Mosier said. "Working out the details of everything is premature if we don't get to the purchase."

"It just seems like we're getting the cart before the horse," Councilwoman Crystal Crawford said. "We need to get over the hurdles of ownership."

Shortly after the news broke in early October that the county's smallest city was planning to buy the 340-acre site, Del Mar asked Solana Beach for a letter supporting the purchase.

Solana Beach council members said they support local control of the fairgrounds, but deferred the request until some of their questions and concerns were addressed.

During a special Del Mar meeting Oct. 25, Solana Beach City Manager David Ott said council members in that city would like some assurance that noise, parking, traffic and light impacts would be mitigated. As a first responder to the fairgrounds, he said Solana Beach is also seeking reimbursement for the public safety services it provides.

Del Mar responded with a letter dated two days later highlighting the benefits of local control of the state-owned facility. In the letter, Del Mar also states that it "is committed to working with" Solana Beach on the key issues of traffic, parking, noise and public safety calls.

Del Mar Mayor Richard Earnest described the Solana Beach response to the letter as "nice but not sufficient."

Earnest and Del Mar Councilman Carl Hilliard also made a presentation at the Oct. 27 Solana Beach council meeting. No issues were resolved but both council members from both cities agreed to meet and continue the discussion.

If the purchase is successful, Del Mar is proposing that the facility be run by an 11-member board made up of five appointees from Del Mar, one each from Solana Beach and the

New fire chief sworn in at reception

RANCHO SANTA FE — The Rancho Santa Fe Fire Protection District hosted a reception Nov. 10 during which Tony Michel was sworn in as the district's new fire chief.

He is filling the role vacated when Chief Nick Pavone retired at the end of October.

"I am very honored and excited to be presented with this opportunity," Michel said. "I am humbled by the confidence the Board of Directors has shown in me and, while I know the position comes with many challenges, I am looking forward to serving the fire district in this capacity."

As the Fire Chief, Michel will be responsible for managing the fire protection and life safety resources for the RSFFPD. He will also provide recommendations and technical staff assistance to the Board of Directors. Chief Michel's other duties will include implementing and enforcing the rules and regulations governing the fire district, continuing the implementation of the district's Strategic Plan, and coordinating activities with other fire and governmental agencies.

Kids Korps, SDG&E plan winter projects

COAST CITIES — Kids Korps and SDG&E have teamed up to present a series of creative service events promoting energy efficiency and conservation.

The SMART Meter program will take old power meters and repurpose them as a youth volunteer activity that will promote the energy efficiency and the new smart meter program countywide.

Participants will work with a variety of artistic mediums (paint, mosaic, recycled items) to create educational works of art from the old meters to be showcased at a variety of public locations countywide. Contact Brian@kidskorps.org for information on scheduling an event for your chapter.

North Coast residents can also let Kids Korps plan your holiday party with a volunteer twist. Parents, let your companies or fellow staff know that Kids Korps can plan a volunteer project as an element to holiday parties. Parties can also benefit foster care centers with Make-A-Blanket, assist in youth diversion with StarPals and Build-A-Bike, benefit a senior center with trees and ornaments through Trees of Hope, sponsor a Head Start pre-school Reading and Book Donation, support military members and families with handmade greeting cards and supplies or bring cheer to seniors or children in shelters through the Recycled Wreath-Making program.
